Aurum Discovery Exercises Option to Acquire Norwegian Sediment-Hosted Copper-Silver Project

Aurum Discovery, a privately held project generator based in the Republic of Ireland, is pleased to announce the execution of its option to purchase all outstanding shares of Norsk Kobberprospektering AS ("NK") via our wholly-owned Norwegian subsidiary, Aurum Norway AS. Aurum Discovery now becomes the sole owner of the Alta sedimentary copper-silver project in northern Norway.

This project consists of more than 300km² of exploration permits covering an extensive strike of the copper-bearing dolomite horizon interpreted to represent a close analogue to the host rocks of the Nussir copper-silver deposit in the adjacent tectonic window. Nussir is owned by Blue Moon Metals (TSX: MOON) who recently announced an estimated start to copper production in late 2027. Aurum Discovery previously acquired a 2.0% NSR on all the NK permit areas.

This project will be advanced in tandem with Aurum's existing project areas in northern Norway and is funded under the Strategic Alliance with a wholly owned subsidiary South32 Limited.

Barry Stoffell, CEO of Aurum Discovery, commented:

"We're delighted to complete this acquisition and expand our exploration footprint in this highly prospective sedimentary copper province. With the addition of this project to our own permits in the Nussir orbit we now hold a basin-scale land position in terrane which already hosts one economic copper deposit and yet has seen virtually no modern exploration on a regional scale."
